New Hotline in Place For Bomb Information

Michelle Ross
Connector Staff

The UML Police Department has set up a new hotline for anyone who has information regarding the recent bomb scares on North Campus. The hotline, effective April 12th, is accessible 24 hours a day, seven days a week. "We won't ask for any names. It's strictly confidential," says Chief of Police Rowe.

A recorded message will pick up and the caller may leave a message. "If they would like to speak with a police officer, we will definitely talk with them," says Rowe. "We need some real help."

UML Police are currently working in cooperation with Lowell Police, the State Fire Marshalls Office, the Massachusetts State Crime Lab and the FBI. "The crimes are covered by federal law as well as state law," explains Rowe. "The Mass State Crime Lab is currently processing evidence for the case." University Police are using all the resources they have to investigate the bombings.

On Monday April 10th, the buildings on North Campus were evacuated once again after the call came in at 5:17 pm. "The caller did not specify where the bomb was exactly," says Chief Rowe. "It was very hard to distinguish the information and the conversation was very brief."

This prompted a complete search of the North Campus buildings; but a bomb was not found. "From the investigation, we came up with significant leads that we're checking out right now," explains Rowe. "There is a serious concern from the community and everyone is cooperating," says Rowe. "They would like to see these bombings stop."

So far there have been 11 bomb scares on campus. On two occasions, non-explosive devices were found. "In the opinion of the Bomb Squad, the devices were packaged to resemble a bomb," says Rowe.

Multiple charges will be brought against the criminal when he or she is caught, including public disruption. "This is a very serious crime here," says Rowe. "It is a felony under state and federal law."

Chief Rowe is confident they will make an arrest eventually. "The resolution is in our own community," says Rowe.

For the safety of everyone involved, University Police is asking for cooperation from any one who has information. The number to call is 934-4213. Confidentiality is guaranteed.

Spring Carnival is just around the corner

Tina Pehrson
Connector Staff

That time of year is upon us again, the time for Spring Carnival. Offered is a week full of activities culminating in an outdoor carnival.

Many activities are being offered during Spring Carnival week, which kicks off April 24th. Monday, the Music Box will be on the second floor of the McGauvran Student Union building from 10am to 4pm. "Bring home a tape of your favorite song sung by none other than yourself." Also offered on Monday is the Original Freak Show featuring Turbo Tom. This event is scheduled from 8-10pm in Cumnock Hall and is sponsored by the Residence Hall Association.

Tuesday, April 25th, at 8:30pm, there will be a fireworks display on the South campus field. After the display, "The Wizard of Oz," will be shown on a drive-in movie screen. Wednesday, April 26th from 11:30 to 1:00pm, Morgan White jr. will appear in the South campus cafeteria and again from 4:30 to 6:00pm in the Fox Hall dining hall. Test your knowledge against the trivia expert! Thursday, April 27th, comedian Bobcat Goldthwait's show, with the UML Dancers opening at 8:00pm. This event is sponsored by the Activities Commission and the Residence Hall Association.

Friday, April 28th, is the Spring Carnival featuring Digable Planets in concert with Reggae opener One People, and the Battle of the Bands winner, Skin. Other activities offered include: Air volleyball, Air Joust, Bouncy Boxing, Bouncy Twister, Velcro Olympics, temporary tattoos, caricature artists, palm readers and - of course - carnival rides. Buses to the Spring Carnival will be provided from 11:00 to 4:30pm. They will be running from Concordia Hall, Fox Hall and Costello field.

Tickets for the Spring Carnival, as well as the comedy show, will be available beginning April 13th. Tickets may be obtained at the Student Information Center on the campus of your major. The tickets are free to students, if picked up in advance. Tickets are 5 dollars for guests, and only one guest per student is allowed.

THE CAMPUS VOICE
Lawyers, Guns & Money
by James Kimble

No price can be put on what police officers do in this country. Without them the law as we know it wouldn't be worth the paper it is printed on.

About three weeks ago, a short but pointed letter which complained about two University Police officers appeared on the Opinion page of the Connector. It insulted the said officers by raising the question as to whether they were qualified to carry guns. The right to carry for the officers on campus is often met with the opinion that there will be a shooting accident which will result in a death of a student.

Like most people, I'd rather not think of what could be waiting for me when I'm walking to my car at night. But the fact is, violent crime is as common a slice of life as walking to one's car. Police have to carry guns because criminals carry guns. Criminals—especially violent ones—are men who have no code of morals or ethics. These are the men whom carry guns; attained illegally, used illegally, and have no certified training to use them.

Police officers are the men and women who are trained to protect the common man in our country.

This all seems to be rudimentary knowledge that would be filed under the common sense category of your brain. Regardless of this, people insist that cops are no more than donut eating, cigarette smoking hacks who have the right to push people around. As violence is simultaneous glorified as a symbol of pride and honor, and denounced as the result of an ethic-free culture, respect for law enforcement is dwindling.

Guns are dangerous, and they should only be carried by those who are educated enough to handle them. Yet any schmuck who lives in the inner-city knows that he or she can illegally obtain one off the street in under an hour. There's only one thing you need to get a gun illegally—money.

Legal hand-gun owners have their guns registered with the state. They must go through a training course, which includes interviews and endless paperwork just to get a target permit. A target permit only allows you to carry a hand-gun to and from a practice range, unconcealed. So if you're a criminal, chances are you don't go this route to get a gun. It takes too long.

I was told by a friend that most officers who didn't pass their permit exams failed the written section. They might have been great shots at the target range, but a bad test grade equals no permit. These men are no longer police officers. They have been demoted to security officers who have about one extra right above students: they can open doors with their impressive collection of keys. I have also been told that a few officers decided not to carry.

Probably one of the most profound bumper stickers I've ever seen read: "IF GUNS WERE OUTLAWED ONLY OUTLAWS WOULD HAVE THEM". Guns will not be eradicated from criminals no matter how many laws are passed. (Sort of like drugs.) So by passing these laws, law-abiders only hurt themselves.

A bitter fact about violent crime is that in many cases police aren't able to arrive on the scene until after a crime happens. And if you think that cute bottle of pepper mace is going to protect someone who really wants to get at you, you're sadly mistaken (unless you have a baseball bat in your other hand). Anyone who doesn't believe this has probably been living somewhere north of Lawrence in a cushioned, wooded area and needs something else to read besides the Connector. Sadly, any daily newspaper will do.

With much thanks to the UMass Police Department, the Campus Escort Service, and of course the Emergency Medical Team (a.k.a. EMT's), the campus at UMass-Lowell is pretty safe at night. I have no problem walking from Fox to North to catch an 8 o'clock movie in Cumnock Hall. Nor do I fear parking in the Vulkor lot since it is monitored, (although my license plate got bent by a clumsy motorist—these things happen).

So who does have the right to carry guns, if police don't? Criminals are going to carry them whether you like it or not. Do you want an officer who does happen to show up before you are victimized without a gun? Mr. Criminal hopes so.

Of course when you're in court some weeks later pressing charges, and listening to Mr. Criminal's lawyer saying how his client had rights, Mr. Criminal might be recording some important information he'll be needing when he gets out—like your name and where you live. Information which is easily attainable. Do you wish your police officer was armed now?

Do you wish you were armed now?

Maybe someone should ask the student who got shot last year if he wished there was an armed police officer on duty prepared to protect him from those who shot him. The point is, the police here are not pseudo-cops who couldn't hack a real police force, so this issue as to whether they are qualified to carry guns is silly. If you need to accept this as a cynic, look at it this way: The last thing the University wants is to ruin its reputation. Bad reputation equals no students. No students equals no University, hence no jobs for administration—you get the idea. So it only makes sense that a University—especially a University—is so well protected.

If you're bent at the police for getting a parking ticket, get over it. It's not their responsibility to find you a parking spot. Wake up early, buy some coffee, you'll find a spot fine. As to anyone else who might have a problem with University Police, talk to them. It's their job to deal with problems and people who have them.

The thought of someone receiving a pay check for the service of risking their life in order to protect people who they don't even know seems strange to me. I suppose it gives altruism a good name. I love my life, so personally I couldn't think of a worse job that I'd give reverence to. This might be some good food for thought the next time you see a funeral procession with a police escort (I drove by one in Lowell today). Ultimately, with the rise of violence in your hometown that's happening as you read this, children are growing and morals are sliding. And perhaps it is the Officer who knows that it's not the law that will improve things. It's the people.

The views expressed here are not especially those of the Connector's and newspapers. On March 30, 1995 Donna Castellano, a Kellogg's Representative flew in from Kellogg's Headquarters, located in Battle Creek Michigan. She was sent to help negotiate the plan. Accompanying her was Mr. Tiger, Tony's father, who insisted that he help bring his son back. Upon arrival at Logan Airport, Castellano was escorted to UMass Lowell's South campus cafeteria. At that point, plans proceeded accordingly. The perpetrators, known as the Young Troublemaker's Collective met with Food Services Director Guy Humeniuk, Donna Castellano and Mr. Tiger to begin negotiating. The meeting began at the crack of dawn, and extended well into the midnight hour.

Details concerning the negotiation have not been disclosed as of yet. However, Young Troublemaker's Collective and Aramark Management have reached a settlement, thanks to Tony Tiger and Kellogg's participating in the negotiation.

Students in Action National Hunger Cleanup helps local shelters

Press Release

Lowell, MA - Today thousands of college students across the U.S. donned jeans and swats and armed with rakes, brooms, and mops, took to the shelters to fight hunger and homelessness. In over 200 communities, students participated in the Eleventh Annual National Hunger Cleanup, a community service work-a-thon that raises money to support local, national, and international hunger relief efforts in the long term while providing direct service to local shelters that need it now.

"The Hunger Cleanup helps the shelters with direct service today while raising needed funds to support them in the long term," said Laurie Smith. MASSPIRG Hunger and Homelessness Coordinator at UMass Lowell. "This is a great way for students to get involved and help out our community."

Thirty students from UMass Lowell and Middlesex Community College volunteered on cleanup and maintenance projects at four agencies in Lowell. They washed windows and floors at the Central Food Ministry and the Open Pantry of Greater Lowell, swept sand from the parking lot at the Merrimack Valley Food Bank, and painted playground equipment at the Merrimack House Family Shelter.

The students also raised several hundred dollars in the process. Half of the money raised will be donated to Merrimack/Pawtucket House Family Shelters while the other half will benefit the National Student Campaign Against Hunger and Homelessness, sponsor of the Hunger Cleanup, and several international anti-poverty programs.

"I'd like to thank MASSPIRG and the students of UMass Lowell and Middlesex Community College for participating in the Hunger Cleanup," said Peggy Shepherd, a spokeswoman for the Merrimack/Pawtucket House Family Shelters. "Both the money and the service this provides are vital to winning the fight against hunger and homelessness."

MASSPIRG is a statewide, student-directed, non-profit organization that conducts research, education and action on issues like hunger and homelessness, environmental preservation and consumer protection. MASSPIRG has chapters at 27 schools throughout Massachusetts.

The National Student Campaign Against Hunger and Homelessness, a project of the PIRGs, is a nationwide organization that works with students at over 600 colleges and universities providing technical assistance in fighting hunger and homelessness.

Shiny, Happy People-Prozac and College Students

James Hibberd
College Press Service

Sally was not happy. So she dropped out of school. "Being smart was never my problem. Actually going to school was," she said. So she began taking drugs. "Amphetamines-crank, mainly-oh, and coke. Still not happy, Sally sought solace from gang members. "I was into very unhealthy relationships."

For five years, Sally's family desperately sought to retrieve some semblance of the Sally they used to know. The anxious, self-destructive person who slept all day and disappeared at night was a stranger. But kindness didn't work. Neither did reasoning nor punishment. By the time Sally was bulimic, her family decided hospitalization was the key and a year of intense therapy followed.

Did therapy change Sally? No.

"I had trouble just getting out of bed and brushing my teeth," she said.

The psychiatrists who came and went never said depression was the problem. Rather, it was Sally's family that first suggested her troubles may be rooted in something deeper than rebellion and attitude. They strongly urged her to talk to a psychiatrist about trying a drug called Prozac. Reluctantly, she agreed.

"After about a month of taking Prozac, I started feeling really normal," Sally said. "I stopped having confrontations with my family, and I felt more in control of my moods."

Fast forward a year and a half to February 1995. The days of eating disorders, drugs and gangs are far behind her. Sally is back in school, a linguistics major, and last semester earned straight A's - "even in Japanese," she said proudly. Her family relationships have never been better. And what about romantic involvement? The wedding is in July.

Not all Prozac stories are as dramatic or successful as Sally's, but now that Prozac is the second most commonly prescribed drug in the nation, there is little doubt it has helped many suffering from depression.

Prozac is leading the new wave of antidepressants, which include Zoloft and Paxil, whose popularity has surpassed the older model tricyclic antidepressants. Boasting fewer side-effects and a success rate topping 65 percent, these "happy pills" have revolutionized and mainstreamed the antidepressant industry since Prozac's introduction in 1988. The drug is being prescribed for an ever-wider range of afflictions and bad habits.

Legally, any doctor can prescribe an anti-depressant, and Prozac's popularity has prompted many non-psychiatric physicians to prescribe the drug for ailments outside the realm of your typical psychiatric disorders.

"But non-psychiatric physicians are not people who are as familiar with the medication in terms of how long the patients need to be treated with Prozac. The ultimate Scooby snack."

So why is medication for depressives being prescribed to treat so many problems?

Prozac was the first antidepressant to solely target the neurotransmitter serotonin, a focus that's considered responsible for Prozac's success. Unlike most neurotransmitters, serotonin is located throughout the brain, which may explain why Prozac affects more than just depression.

While the receivers of the nearly 1 million prescriptions written each month along with the doctors writing them may seem to agree, there is still a certain level of nervousness surrounding Prozac's long-term effects. Perhaps it's simply an inherent cynicism of depressives, but many feel there must be a price to pay for all this normalcy in pill form.

Long-term effects aside, Prozac is not without more apparent drawbacks. In particular, the drug has been known to hamper a couple of favorite college pastimes: drinking and sex.

At least one former Prozac user, Lillian, stopped taking Prozac because of these interferences. The recent UT graduate suffered from chronic depression or, as she puts it, "being suicidal every day of my life."

During her senior year at UT, Lillian sought help from the counseling center. One of the doctors prescribed Prozac, which she took for a few months.

"I guess maybe I felt a little better," she admits. "But nothing that noticeable."

What Lillian certainly did notice was Prozac's influence on her sex drive. "It screwed up my sex life, I was no longer orgasmic," Lillian said.

The reduction of sexual sensation and drive is a common complaint among users of antidepressants. In Lillian's case, the doctor put her on additional medication to counteract the sexual numbing which, to her horror, made her gain weight.

Lillian discovered disturbing things happened when she ignored her doctor's warning and drank alcohol on Prozac.

"You're not supposed to drink while taking the medication, but of course I did anyway," Lillian said. She sighs, "I would get very aggressive and go up to people to say things I would never normally say, I was pretty bitchy. I'd always want to take off my clothes in public places, then I'd black out and the next day people would tell me things I had done."

She quit the medication and still suffers depression today.

Like Lillian, Sally also finds that Prozac affects drinking and sex but has a different attitude toward the inhibitions on her lifestyle. "I have to watch myself because even just a little bit of alcohol can unleash my anger," Sally said.

In addition to not experiencing the benefits of Prozac, Lillian also didn't receive the positive family support and encouragement Sally did. Said Lillian: "They didn't really want to hear about it, they didn't think I needed to be on medication, they couldn't understand why I was so depressed. 'Just get over it,' they would tell me."

This sort of reaction is why many people, as exhibited by the pseudonyms used in this story, are not comfortable disclosing they use antidepressants. Uninformed friends and family can often view the medication as a dangerous and addictive drug, even after seeing the improvement displayed by people like Sally.

Whether it's the social taboo or fears of long-term consequences, many Prozac users are uncomfortable with the notion of taking an antidepressant indefinitely. While Prozac and other antidepressants are not addictive and therefore have no withdrawal symptoms, some have found Prozac to be their mental life preserver. And a life preserver is a difficult thing to let go of.

Phoebe, a photojournalism junior, is one who did.

After moving to Austin, the 21 year old found herself friendless in an unfamiliar town. She was sleeping all day, and doing poorly in school. Phoebe turned to Prozac, but she is quick to point out that drug didn't cure her problems.

"It didn't really change how much I slept or how I did in school," she explains. "All it did was change my attitude and make me willing to try harder, and it didn't happen overnight."

Socially, Phoebe's life was similarly improved. Some users of antidepressants find they are less intimidated by social situations.

After a year of taking Prozac, Phoebe felt satisfied with her grades, social life and emotional state. She decided she no longer needed the medication.

"I think they're good for temporary, to get someone out of their depression, but then they need to be weaned off," Phoebe said.

Though staying on Prozac is necessary for some, Dr. Gary Morton also promotes Prozac as a temporary solution.

"This is not a medication that people are intended to be on for a long time," he said.

Twentysomethings Take More Sick Days, Poll Finds

New York - As if Generation X doesn't get enough bad press as it is, now comes word that twenty-something employees take more bogus days off work.

A Gallup poll of 671 adults indicates that nearly 25 percent of employees between the ages of 18-29 abuse their sick days. The study, commissioned by Accountants on Call, an accounting placement firm in New Jersey, found that Gen Xers fake illness twice as many times as employees between 30 and 49 years old, and four times as much as workers 50 and older.

Gallup officials point out that the results may not be dramatic as they seem, since workers grow more loyal and responsible toward their companies as they grow older. Still, the numbers aren't going to stop some from shaking their heads and saying "Kids today..."

Twenty-five percent of workers between the ages of 18 and 29 said they put on their best sore-throat voice and call in sick two times a year. Only 14 percent of the 30 to 39 year old workers admit doing the same, as did 13 percent of those 40 to 49 years old. Proving integrity advances with age, only 6 percent of employees 50 or older admit to coming down with the "blue flu."

The study also found that employees closer to the coasts took more days off work. Employees in Maine, Florida, Texas and California took nearly twice as many personal days as their flatland counterparts in the Midwest.

Rapper Threatens to Blow Whistle on Miami Football

Coral Gable, Fla. - Although the first kickoff is still months away, an off-the-field controversy is already calling attention to the University of Miami's football team.

Rap star Luther Campbell of 2 Live Crew fame is threatening to blow the whistle on the Hurricanes football program if the starting quarterback job doesn't go to Ryan Collins, an African American.

Campbell says that if Collins doesn't open the season as starting QB against UCLA on Sept. 2, he'll come forward with information about NCAA violations within the Miami program.

And Campbell claims he has enough violations to give the prominent collegiate football program the death penalty.

In the past few years, several former UM football players said that Campbell used to pay them for their performances on the football field, offering up to $500 if players scoring a touchdown in big games. Campbell denied the accusations at the time.

Coach Butch Davis says that he won't be influenced by outsiders in terms of football decisions. The newly hired Davis replaces former coach Dennis Erickson, who now coaches the Seattle Seahawks.

Miami Athletic Director Paul Dee agrees, adding that Campbell's threats are useless. "Coach Davis has to do what's best for the University of Miami," Dee said. "He'll put the best 11 players on the football field."

Collins, a fifth-year senior from Miami Lakes, is competing against Ryan Clement and Scott Covington for the starting quarterback job. Tabbed by many as the starter last year, Collins eventually lost out to senior Frank Costa before the season opener.

Teammates say that if Davis chooses to start Clement or Covington ahead of Collins this year, the quarterback may opt for the Canadian Football League.

Shannon Faulkner Speaks Out

Columbia, S.C. - Shannon Faulkner, who is seeking to be the first female cadet at the all-male Citadel, has hit the banquet circuit, hoping to raise money from speaking engagements to fund her education and pay her legal bills.

Faulkner, who attends The Citadel as a day student, is suing the state-funded military college in an attempt to become the first female cadet in the institution's 152-year history. In March, Faulkner spoke before audiences across the Southeast in honor of Women's History Month.

At a speech at the University of South Carolina, Faulkner addressed those critics who say she is making a mockery of the all-male military school tradition. "There are quite a few people who say I am destroying The Citadel," Faulkner said. "I am not. I am making it better."

The 20-year-old student told the crowd of more than 250 that she enrolled at The Citadel because of its military setting, its prestige and reputation, its education department and its alumni network.

Audience outbursts occur at most of her speaking engagements, usually resulting in a quick debate between Faulkner and her detractors. At one point during the USC speech, Faulkner was interrupted by protesters who carried a "Save the Males" banner.

"I expect some people to be angry," Faulkner said. "But this is something I believe to be unjust. The fact that it's so difficult makes me realize how important it is."

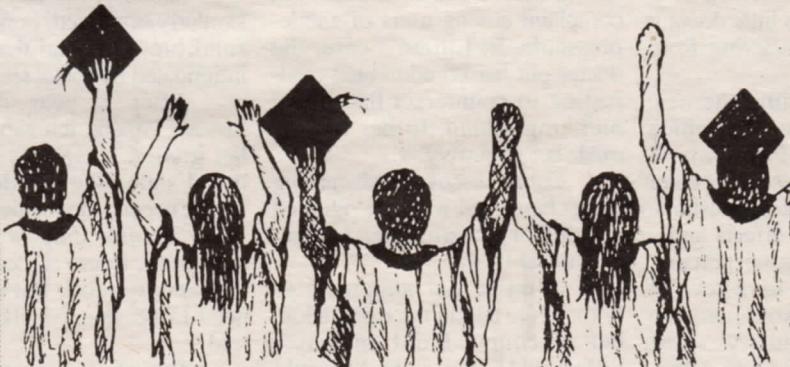

While a senior in high school, Faulkner applied to The Citadel after deleting all references to her gender on her transcripts. She was accepted into the school, then rejected after Citadel officials learned her transcripts had been altered. She filed a lawsuit seeking admission to the school in February 1993 and now is enrolled as a student, not as a cadet.

While the case is still tied up in court, Faulkner acknowledged that her time is running out. Students must be admitted into the Corps of Cadets program by their junior year, which Faulkner begins in August.

"I'll be a cadet this fall," Faulkner said. "The law is on my side."

WANTED: Members For The Buddy Team

The Office of Student Activities, Student Centers, and Commuter Services is looking to recruit students into the "Buddy Team". This program has been developed to assist new commuter and resident students, through mutual support, to become better acquainted to UMass Lowell and the surrounding community. The Buddy Team seeks to match students with the same majors and/or interests so that students who are familiar to the campus may help new students in getting used to the campus.

To find out more details about the Buddy Team and to learn how you can get involved, you are invited to attend one of the meetings listed below, or to call Mary Connelly, Director, the Office of Student Activities, Student Centers, and Commuter Services, at x5001.

STUDENTS BEWARE!

The Spring Term is quickly coming to an end. If you need a Student Loan to meet your financial responsibilities to the University, please drop by the Student Loan Office to speak to one of our Loan Counselors. The Loan Office is located in the McGauvran Student Center.
Hours are 8:30am to 5pm.

It may be too late if you wait much longer.

Students who have processed loans and are waiting for the loan disbursements to reach the University are reminded that they need to complete Entrance Interview requirements, if they haven't already.

Remember, loan disbursements need to be negotiated within 45 days of the schools' receiving them.

Internships at WCVB Channel 5 and The United States Olympic Committee

The Office of Minority Student Affairs (OMSA) has received announcements regarding internship and fellowship programs at WCVB-TV Boston. The internships are designed to attract people of color to careers in the broadcasting industry.

Applicants for the Hearst Fellowship for News Producing should be recent college graduates with BA or BS degree, with interest in broadcast journalism, demonstrated through past internships and extracurricular activities associated with the fields of communications and journalism. Application deadline is April 30, 1995.

Students interested in applying for the Summer Minority Internship Program at WCVB should be entering their senior year in Fall 95, be a US citizen, studying some field of broadcasting. The 12-week summer program is an opportunity for students to obtain an overview of TV broadcasting by completing an assignment in news, programming, public affairs, or sales. Deadline for applications is April 30, 1995.

The United States Olympic Committee Intern Program has sites in Colorado Springs, Colorado and Lake Placid, New York. To be eligible for an internship with the USOC, the individual must have completed 2 years of college, be enrolled in an undergrad or graduate program with an expected graduation date no earlier than Dec. 1995.

The USOC provides the Student Intern Program to:

- Assist colleges and universities which require or allow internships in degree preparation by providing appropriate opportunities.

- Provide quality work experience to students requiring on-the-job training for graduation.
- Provide additional resources to the USOC and its member organizations.
- Provide students with the unique opportunity of exposure to the Olympic Movement and the spirit of Olympism.

The USOC is now accepting applications from eligible students for internship positions for the 1995 Fall semester in the following areas:

Accounting: GPA of 3.2 or better, Intermediate Accounting I and II. (Colorado Springs)

Computer Science: 3.0 GPA, PC programming skills, word processing skills, ability to work well with clients. (Colorado Springs)

Journalism: Excellent writing skills, desktop publishing desirable, experience in sports info. or student publications preferred. (Colorado Springs and Lake Placid)

Marketing: Grad or undergrad majoring in Business Administration or Marketing. (Colorado Springs)

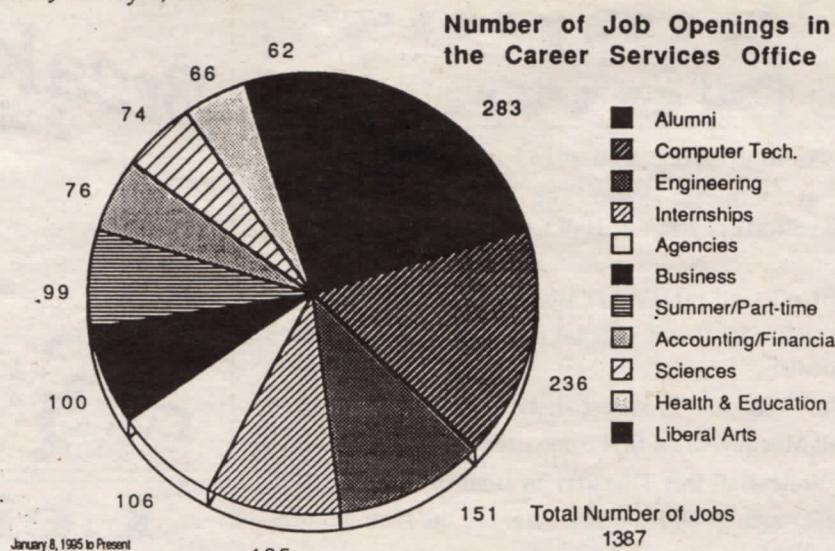

Sports Science: Grad or undergrad majoring in Exercise Physiology or related field. Previous work in weight room preferred. (Colorado Springs and Lake Placid)

Applications for the Fall Semester must be received by June 1, 1995.

For additional information and application materials, interested individuals should contact Suzanne Gamache at the Office of Minority Student Affairs, Room 336, McGauvran, extension 4336.

WHERE ARE ALL THE JOBS?

Interesting statistics have been released by the Career Services Office. The following graph has been released that shows 1,387 new job openings that have been received in the office since January 8, 1995.

The Career Service Office is receiving on average 28 new positions daily. The office caters not only to the full-time positions required by seniors, but also to non-graduating students through a variety of internship, part-time and full-time summer positions. Any student looking to gain employment now or in the future should stop by the Career Services Office to find out more about their programs. A career counselor will be more than happy to answer your questions and aid you in your job search. Programs offered through the Career Office include:

- resume critiquing
- career counseling
- on campus interviewing
- internships/co-ops opportunities

- resume releases
- interviewing etiquette

Leitch Hall News

Dawn, Sarah, Chris and Scott would like to thank the residents from the 3rd and 4th floor for their attendance at the floor dinner held in the Fox Den two Thursdays ago.

Rumor has it that Chris, the RA from the 3rd floor, is holding another trip to go indoor rock climbing. Also, be on the look out for a building wide video game tournament and a pool tournament to take place sometime in April.

South Notes

Thanks to the participants of this weeks T.G.I.T. program. The Easter social and egg hunt was a complete success, and good time was had by all. To those who didn't participate, your all a bunch of chickens! (Ha Ha). Don't miss the Sex Bowl this week, it's always a great time. Get psyched for the Sheehy Savings Auction on April 26th. Fox Hall Update Attention Fox Hall residents, Coming Sunday April 23rd we are holding our first Annual Cribbage Tournament. It will be held at 7:00 P.M. in the 18th floor lobby. There is no fee to enter and prizes will be awarded. If you wish to participate, please contact Jody (x5360), Brian (x5349), or Russ (x5337). 1st prize is a $20.00 gift certificate, 2nd prize is a $10.00 gift certificate. Refreshments will be served, and we hope to see you there!

A special thanx to all those who attended Jermaine's showing of Menace to Society Last Tuesday. The food was great. Thanx Jermaine!

Spring Carnival Week is Alcohol Awareness Week

The Residence Life Wellness Committee, along with the campus and Lowell communities, is sponsoring a week of events to help educate students about the responsible use of alcohol. Many thousands of students die each year from alcohol-related accidents. Drinking and driving is a preventable problem, and with proactive educational messages, some lives may be saved. The following events are being held to show that students can be responsible where alcohol is involved, and we are asking for your support and attendance at these events to recognize that.

Lost But Not Forgotten

On Monday, April 24th, participating students will wear a specially designed t-shirt and white face paint to represent the fatalities of alcohol-related accidents. Throughout the day, these participants will be silent and hand out cards that explain what this event is about.

Candlelight March

On Wednesday, April 26th, at approximately 7:30 p.m., students will be marching from residential North Campus to South Campus in a remembrance of the victims of alcohol-related accidents. On South campus, there will be speakers and other events for participants at this time.

Crash At Noon

On Thursday, April 27th, at noon, a mock accident will be staged that will illustrate the dangers of drunk driving. This event is being staged with the help of many local and campus organizations. Come to see first hand what can happen and also to show your support for our message.

Information Booths

Look for information booths that will have updated information on the new laws about drinking and driving and how they affect students. Also available will be other items, posters, gifts, and pamphlets. Look for them on Monday, 4/24 in Fox; Tuesday, 4/25, in the Southwick Lounge; and Wednesday, 4/26 in the McGauvran SUB.

If students or faculty are interested in participating, please call extension 5088 and leave a message for Greg. All students, faculty, and staff are invited to participate in all of the events.

Review: Sam Keith's
*The Maxx
Airs Mondays at 10 P.M.
MTV's "Oddities"

Lately, there's been a renaissance of comic book super hero cartoons; the latest is "The Maxx", based on the Image comic created by artist and writer Sam Keith. But unlike recent fare like "Spider Man" and "X-Men" on Fox. "The Maxx" is unique for a lot of reasons. For starters it demands intelligence on the part of the viewer to see the story behind the dazzling visuals.

The title character, The Maxx, appears to be a very unusual homeless person. He wears a purple and yellow suit, has a body that's a cross between a hunchback and a bodybuilder, and has a sharp claw on each hand where his middle finger should be. Add the fact that he has visions of himself as a warrior in an alternative reality version of Australia, he tries his best to fight crime, and keeps talking to himself. His best and only friend Julie is even more unusual. She's a freelance social worker who sports a wardrobe that contains ensembles from Madonna's 80's yard sale and worships feminist Camile Paglia. In Maxx's visions, Julie is a being called the Leopard Queen. The question is, are these visions real or is the Maxx crazy? And if he is, how does that explain the presence of the Izzits, little toothy creatures from the Maxx's visions hanging around with a man called Mr. Gone, a huge robed bald chap who's responsible for a series of brutal rapes and murders in the city?

The only way to find out is to check out the show. Did I mention that the visuals are dazzling? With a blend of traditional and computer animation, Keith's comic comes to life, as the animators' artwork highly resembles his own. The story, with some slight changes, is skillfully translated to the screen and the voices fit their characters beautifully.

What makes this cartoon intelligent is that any action or fighting takes a back seat to the mature issues presented in the series such as feminism, rape and the psychological drama behind Maxx's visions and the questions they raise. The Maxx does find out at the end of the first episode that his visions are real, but what do they mean? If you're a fan of The Maxx or are someone who feels that American animation can't get beyond the pre-adolescent stage of intelligence, then you can't afford to miss these episodes.

MUSIC REVIEW

JOAN OSBORNE
MERCURY/POLYGRAM

With her release of Relish, Joan Osborne belts out an emotional and spiritually uplifting mix of folk, blues, and rock. The first release on Mercury/Polygram's Blue Gorilla Records, it's being hailed as a strong debut, with the 27 year-old Kentuckian Osborne creating a feverishly good album laden with her love for the blues. Osborne started out like many of the bands at Lowell's own Sugar Shack do every Wednesday—at open mic night (for her, it happened at the now defunct Abilene Bar). Now, just three years later, Osborne has garnered many critics' approval as an exciting folk/rock innovator; she proves this with Relish.

The album starts out with its best song (this does not diminish its quality, for what follows is just as good), "St. Teresa," whose title is taken from the 16th century Carmelite nun who shunned comfort, opting instead to suffer as did Jesus. The song itself, however, is Osborne's sympathetic parallel to the drug user/sellers around where Osborne lives in New York: "She down on the corner/Just a little crime/When I make my money/Got to get my dime." Osborne's cover of Bob Dylan's "Man In the Long Black Coat" sends it into modern ballad status. In repetitive "Right Hand Man" and "Ladder," Osborne seems to pay tribute to Wendy & Lisa's style, though she combines that with a touch of Bonnie Raitt's throaty rock vocals. "Pensacola" and "Help Me" are two true bluesy songs; both go straight to the roots of blues and branch out. Osborne's spreads the gospel on thick in "Spider Web;" lastly, in the midst of all of this folk and rock is the sensual, grunge-like "Let's Just Get Naked." Her vocals on "Naked," though her own, are very Courtney Love: "I know what you're hiding from me/You know what I'm hiding from you...Let's just get naked for laughs..."

It's mind-boggling to know that Osborne has not been doing this all of her life (though from the album it may seem so). Her album is recommended for the music enthusiast—whether you're into folk, rock, grunge, or pop, you'll relish in Osborne's impressive Relish.

Clancy: The Great Entertainer Part II By Kevin Winters

Clancy was still sitting on the sidewalk thinking about his father's reaction to his news-news that he wanted to be an entertainer. The colorful leaves were still gracefully falling to the ground. Clancy was deep in thought.

"So your Dad doesn't like your idea?" "Huh?"

I turned and saw my imaginary friend Clover the Leprechaun leaning against the tree.

"I can't believe he got so mad." Clancy replied as he was staring at the leaves.

Clover walked over and sat down beside him. "Don't worry." He said gently.

He will calm down but you know he's right about school and your education. You can't just go out and become a movie star. You need an education. Be smart and intelligent like me." Clover said as he smiled at me.

"So what are you trying to tell me." I asked.

"Well, what I'm saying is don't run away and join a circus. Don't do anything foolish. Remember to always listen to your parents. They know what they are doing."

"Clancy! Clancy!" Danny, who is my oldest brother, shouted.

"Supper is ready! Who are you talking to?" Danny asked.

Clancy turned around--Clover was gone. "Umm, nobody."

"Come on in Clancy." Danny said as he walked away shaking his head. I followed my brother into the house. It was supper time and everybody was seated at the table.

"Dad...you know you're right. I am going to finish school. Maybe someday I'll even become a doctor." I smiled and held a glass of milk in the air. "Hey Dad...if I ever make a lot of money I'll build a mansion just for you and Mom."

"I can't wait for that." My father said as he held his glass of milk up.

After supper I turned on the radio. The Shadow and the Abbott and Costello were airing. I was in heaven listening to my favorite programs.

Well, that summer was pretty exciting. My father bought me a brand new bicycle. Everyday I would play baseball with my friends in the park. After the games I would entertain everyone on the bench doing impersonations of famous movie stars.

One hot Saturday morning in July, my friends and I met at our clubhouse in the woods behind our house.

"Hey look at this!" Jason shouted excitedly, holding his binoculars to his eyes. "The girls are out in their yard again in their bathing suits!"

"Let me see!" I grabbed the binoculars and looked through them.

"Holy smokes!" We started laughing.

"Hey I'll give you a quarter if you go in there and scare them or I'll give you a free coke float at my Dad's place." I replied.

"Come on Jason--just go." I was trying to convince him. "Come on one big adventure before our ballgame."

"Alright, ok..but you promise me a free coke float? Right?" Jason asked. He then climbed down from the tree and ran toward the yard while I was watching him through the binoculars. I stepped back but the floor had rotted. My leg went through and half the floor collapsed. I dropped my binoculars and I was dangling from the tree house. "Help! Help!" I screamed. The tree was very high. Jason was just about to sneak in the yard when he heard me crying for help. The girls also heard me. Jason quickly ran back to help me.

"Clancy! Oh my God! Don't move!" Jason shouted. He quickly climbed up the tree on the other side. As he was climbing up he heard some creaking noises from the clubhouse. The clubhouse was ready to collapse. Jason pulled me to safety and both of us climbed down fast. We ran away from the tree. The clubhouse collapsed.

"You saved my life!" I said. "Thanks."

"Now you really owe me a huge sundae!" Jason smiled.

"That's right! If I ever make a lot of money I'll take care of you!"

Well in 1954 I graduated from grammar school and was going to Sullivan High. The Graduation ceremony took place inside Saint Steven's Church.. I was day dreaming as usual about my future. As the principal announced my name. I was not paying attention. "The academic award goes to Clancy Cornelius!" Sister Sadie announced.

I looked at my friend Jason. "Did somebody call my name?" I asked.

"Yes go up." Jason whispered back.

I walked up to the principal and accepted the award. When I turned around everybody was clapping. I smiled back at them. As I walked back to my bench. Suddenly I saw Clover sitting there. As I came closer he disappeared. I had a wonderful huge graduation party that afternoon. One I'll never forget.

I was a little nervous on my first days of high school. But it wasn't too long before I was entertaining again. I was doing impersonations of my teachers and some famous stars in front of my classmates. One day my English teacher, Mr. Braham asked me to be in the talent show. But I told him no. I was very afraid to go on stage in front of people.

One day after school I decided to take a walk inside the auditorium. It was dark inside but a few lights were shining on the stage. I walked up toward the front. I walked on the stage toward the piano. I sat down on the stool and started to play something. I had no idea what I

I was playing but I loved the sound of the piano. I started to sing like Groucho Marx. "I wish I had a piano. If I only had a piano!"

"Very good Clancy you're very funny." Clover said as he clapped his hands. "You're very good on stage. You should go back and tell Mr. Braham you want to be in the talent show."

"But I can't I'm not good enough... and I'm scared."

"Nonsense. You can do it. Remember this," said Clover, "Push through the crowd and reach for the stars and your dream will come true."

"You really think so, Clover?" I continued to sing a different song and play the piano.

"That was great! You sounded just like that actor in the movie Singing in the Rain!" This time it was the janitor. "You were good! Is that what you're doing in the talent show!"

"Umm." I felt something in my hand, I opened my hand and it was a gold coin and on it was a picture of a pot of gold. It said "Push through the crowd, reach for the stars and you're dream will come true." I smiled as I felt a warm feeling inside of me.

"Yes, I'm going to be in the show."

Dennis DelloIacano's review of Elton John's Made In England, was misprinted to quote Mr. John as follows:

"You can still say "Hello." and everybody laughs."

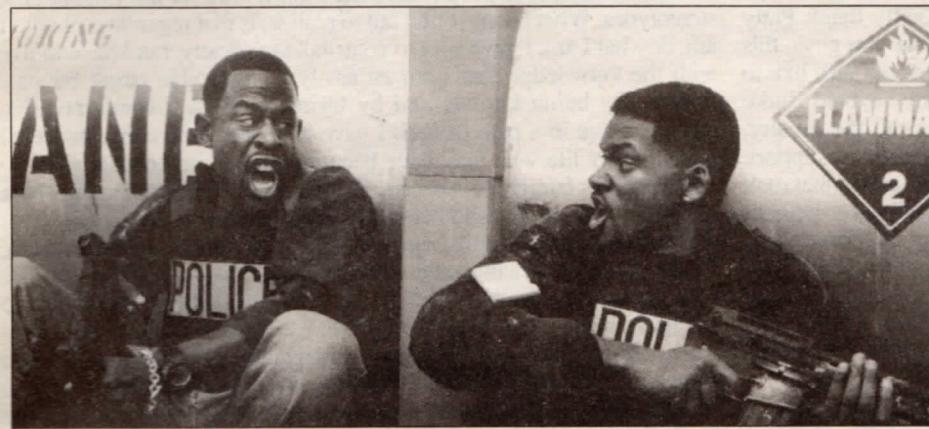

The proper quote is:

"You can still say "homo" [as in homosexual] and everybody laughs."

MOVIE REVIEWS

BAD BOYS
•MARTIN LAWRENCE/WILL SMITH•
COLUMBIA PICTURES

Bad Boys starring comedian Martin Lawrence and rapper Will Smith ("Fresh Prince of Bel Air") is action packed, similar in plot to the movie Lethal Weapon; but, with more comedy. Columbia Pictures has brought together two of television's biggest stars. Both actors play Miami cops who must find a hundred million dollars in stolen heroin before the department is shut down. Due to the mysterious circumstances surrounding the theft, detectives Burnett (Lawrence) and Lowrey (Smith) track a cunning thief into the Miami underworld, constantly dodging bullets and bad guys along the way. Some time later, a sexy witness (Tea Leoni) comes along who can identify the thief, but when she calls the station, she'll only talk to Lowrey and Lowrey is not around. Thinking fast, Burnett impersonates his partner to take the call. However, there's one catch: He has to pretend to be Lowrey for the duration of the case or risk losing her trust. Between shoot-outs and car chases, married man Burnett has to stick close to their only witness while playboy Lowrey goes home to his partner's wife and kids, maintaining the charade until the case is solved.

Lawrence and Smith work well in this film together. Neither actor tries to upstage the other. Both actors are in the twenties and are at the peak of their professional careers. Actress Theresa Randle ("Sugar Hill") portrays Lawrence's wife and does an excellent job of playing his significant other. This film should do average to excellent at the box office. If it does well enough, Smith and Lawrence will probably do a sequel. "Bad boys" is a fairly good movie with excellent acting and a decent script. Get out, go see it and have a good time.

STUART SMALLEY SAVES HIS FAMILY
•AL FRANKEN/LAURA SAN GIACOMO•
PARAMOUNT PICTURES

In the great tradition of Wayne's World, Saturday Night Live's Stuart Smalley, known best as the guru of 12-step programs everywhere and his own "Daily Affirmation", hosts his own cable access show in Stuart Saves His Family. Smalley's effeminate lamenting over boxes and boxes of cookies and his tendency to help those who reject him most provide plenty of instances that are logically awkward, but not funny enough to laugh at. The troubles that Stuart encounters between his show in Chicago and his clueless family in Minnesota — at best — merit an occasional insincere snicker.

Little is known about Smalley's personal life. Smalley's suggestive lisp and his choice of pink and yellow sweaters plays on the old stereotype of gay males; yet this issue remains unaddressed in the film. This avoidance might not be so obvious if it wasn't for the ambiguous relationship between Smalley and his very attractive female sponsor. This, accompanied by a pure lack of comedy at the films' core, perpetuates the unaddressed issue. If the movie provided continuous laughter, one might care little about Smalley's romantic interests—this does not happen. instead, the movie bounces from Stuart's problems with his on-again/off-again show to his family's dealing with alcoholism, overeating, and court settlements. The uplifting elements of Stuart "saving" his family hardly help the film other than to fill a hole.

Perhaps 20 years ago, Smalley's play on homosexuality would get big laughs. Today, it can maintain a 2 minute chuckle. But this humor, like most of the decent writing on SNL, has passed.

Statehouse Success!!!

I would like to take this opportunity to personally thank everyone that participated in Statehouse Day last Tuesday. If you haven't already heard, UMass Lowell had more students at the Statehouse than any other school that was there (including UMass Amherst)!!! Our lobbying efforts for a higher budget allocation are already paying dividends with a rumored increase in the House of Representatives. Also, Senate President William Bulger's speech was very encouraging for increased funding of public higher education in the Senate. If this happens, there is a very strong chance that we will have our fee increases rolled back for the second consecutive year. The importance of having so many students at the Statehouse will have even more of an effect when the Board of Trustees allocates money to the individual campuses, as we will have been more responsible than the other campuses for obtaining the increased money. This will give myself and the administration more leverage when asking the Trustees to increase funding for our campus.

Once again, I would like to thank so many people for making this day such a success. First of all, thank you to my organizational "committee" consisting of Tim Lewman, Lauren Travers, Julie Thomas, and Corey Lewandowski who spent a lot of quality time on the preparation for this day. I would like to especially thank Patty Coffey, Patty's friend Alex, and Ryan Tucker--without you guys, this day definitely wouldn't have been able to happen. I would also like to especially give thanks to Christine McKenna and Amy Seybold-Burke for your invaluable contributions, as well as thanks to the faculty, administration, and Residence Life staff for your help and support. Lastly, I would like to especially thank each and every student that took the day out of classes to make the trek down to the Statehouse--without you, this day definitely wouldn't have been successful. If I forgot anyone, I deeply apologize and thank you nonetheless. I have rarely had such a warm feeling in my chest similar to that which was given to me when I saw how many students were concerned about our future.

Thank you very much and you'll be hearing from me soon--Good luck.

I belong to the Campus Life Task Force for Multi-Culturalism and Diversity. We thought it would be a good idea to begin a column in The Connector for the purpose of letting others hear of different experiences here at the University. All of us have unique qualities and sometimes these differences are difficult for others to accept. These differences may include issues of race, gender, physical or mental handicaps, sexuality, socioeconomic status or any one of a very long list of differences that we see in each other every day. By being able to address both the positive and negative experiences we have had, we might be able to understand these differences more clearly.

We would like to encourage any individual to write to us with their contributions. Jaques Dessin and I, Matthew Drouin, will be working with the Task Force regarding the submissions. The only thing we ask, is that you do not use specific names when discussing others. We want you to be able to speak freely, but we will not allow people to use this opportunity in a detrimental way. If you are interested in contributing, please send your submissions to the Office of Student Activities, McGauvran 234, with a name and a way to contact you. If you would like to contribute, but remain unknown to the readers, we would be more than happy to accommodate these wishes. I would like to begin with my own submission.

I have had a very successful five years here at the University. I have had some very difficult experiences here at UML since the end of my first semester as a freshman. I came out in the spring semester of my Freshman year as a homosexual. This was difficult for many people to accept, but not nearly as difficult as it was for me to keep hidden for the previous twenty-one years of my life. Overall, the University community has been understanding, but there were, and still are, people who find it necessary to hate others. I choose to work publicly for the elimination of discrimination, hatred and fear of gay men and women, and with this choice comes many risks. I have done many presentations on and off campus regarding homosexuality and homophobia because I believe people have the right to truthful information, not stereotypes. What people often fail to realize, is that regardless of who I am, or what I am, I have a lot to contribute to society, but I have to live with the knowledge that I am an easily recognizable target for hate crimes. By being known, and by trying to work towards positive change, I live in a path of fear. I have also had to be concerned with others in my life who may have been affected by my choice to be so open, such as family, co-workers, and especially friends. These people must live with others who believe they are gay by being my friend, or that homosexuality is a disease that is going to rub off and infect them. Worse yet is the idea that others believe that I must have AIDS because I am gay, so they walk around me, or walk across the street so they do not have to say hello even though we are headed to the same classroom. I do not have AIDS and if I did, it shouldn't make a difference anyway. It appears that a little knowledge can go a very long way.

It has become very clear to me that no one can be considered free until all oppression ends. This has probably been the most significant lesson I have learned over my years. When you are oppressed, when you do not have the same rights as others, it is difficult, and you begin to understand others who have been in the same position. My experiences have mostly been positive. I was the first openly gay student to be elected here at the University and I am pleased to serve as the Senior Class President for the Class of 1995. I hope others have also realized that regardless of my sexual orientation, I deserve the same rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness. I deserve the right to love, to have children, to an education, to a job, to housing, to speak, to be! "Any ideology that attacks what least threatens it, is an ideology that is doomed to failure." An Open Letter to all UML Students

As you know, Spring Carnival will be held on April 28, 1995. We are asking for your help. In the past, parties held over the weekend of Spring Carnival have resulted in strained relationships between the citizens of Pawtucketville and the University.

We have worked very hard to build Spring Carnival into the tradition it has become. We would hate to see it canceled forever. Therefore, please consider the following:

1) Party Smart- Public drinking is against the law, whether on your lawn or the street. Over the weekend, there will be increases in police coverage in the neighborhoods as well as road blocks to discourage excessive drinking. Please don't let your friends drive drunk! Realize that arrests will be made this year in response to complaints raised last year. Is it worth it to spend the night in jail?

2) Respect your neighbors- Please keep noise levels down in deference to families with young children and senior citizens. Please check in the morning and clean any trash resulting from your guests in the neighborhood. With your help and cooperation, this can be the most successful Spring Carnival ever.

3) Finally- Try to bear in mind that the UML's judicial process extends to off-campus residents also. All students have received a copy of the student conduct handbook from the Office of University Life earlier this semester.

Thank you for your anticipated cooperation and enjoy Spring Carnival 1995!!

Asian American Heritage Celebration Week May 1-5, 1995

Asian American Heritage Week is made possible by volunteers and donations.

The Ad Hoc Organizing Committee wishes to thank the following organizations and individuals for their contribution: Co-sponsors, University Council on Diversity and Pluralism, Community Collaboration Task Force, Campus Life Task Force, Provost's Office, Office of Student Activities, Office of Community Service, Cambodian Student Association, Chinese Student Circle, Indian Student Association, R.O.C. Graduate Student Association, Vietnamese Student Association. Special Thanks to: Chancellor William T. Hogan, Provost Sukant Tripathy, Mary Connelly, Dir. Student Activities, Lan Pho, Dir. Minority Affairs.

President Jimmy Carter and all the succeeding President of the United States have proclaimed the month of May as the Asian American Heritage Celebration Committee at the University cordially invites you to participate in a week long celebration of the many Asian heritage's that have taken root in the Merrimack Valley region. The many Asian communities in this region have increasingly contributed to the economic growth, social diversity, and cultural enrichment of the American society. With the rapid economic development of the Pacific rim countries now and into the 21st century, the local Asian-American communities can also serve as effective bridges to build the collaboration between Massachusetts educational, commercial, and industrial institutions with their counterparts in Asia.

The planned celebration serves as an initial step in the recognition of the richness and contribution of the Asian communities in Massachusetts. This event is being enthusiastically supported by the University Council on Diversity and Pluralism and many Asian Student organizations at the University.

We invite you to participate in these celebrations with your family and friends, and make this event a success. All events are free and have open admission. For more information, please write or call: Center for Diversity and Pluralism, McGauvran Student Union, Room 335, University of Massachusetts Lowell, Lowell, MA 01854, Tel: (508) 934-4342 or 4335, Fax: (508) 934-3019.

Attention UML Students!!!

The University Council on Diversity and Pluralism and the Campus Life Task Force, are in search of a logo. We are encouraging students, with artistic skills, to participate in our logo drawing contest. The logos should accentuate the concept of multiculturalism or pluralism.

All logo entries will be viewed by a special committee, which will pick the top two entries that best illustrate the concept of pluralism/multiculturalism. Prizes will be awarded to the top two contestants—$100 for the first place and $50 for second place.

All entries must be submitted to: Jacques Dessin, Box 5291 (South Campus) on an 8.5 x 11 sheet of paper or canvas, no later than Thursday, April 27. For more information, please contact Jacques at ext. 6251. Remember: Creativity and imagination are more important than knowledge!!!

NECCUM Offers Students A Circle of Choice

The Northeast Consortium of colleges and Universities in Massachusetts (NECCUM) offers students a choice of eleven higher education institutions where they can take courses while enrolled at only one. The Consortium institutions include: Bradford College, Endicott College, Gordon College, Marian Court College, Merrimack College, Middlesex Community College, Monserrat College of Art, North Shore Community College, Northern Essex Community College, Salem State College, and University of Massachusetts/Lowell.

Gordon College student, Julie Jenkins cross-registered for a course at Endicott College. "I was able to complete a graduation requirement while broadening my education and experiencing the curriculum and faculty at another institution."

Pam Chi a student enrolled at Middlesex Community College (MCC), in Lowell, cross-registered for a math course at the University of Massachusetts at Lowell. "The course I wanted was not offered at MCC. A friend told me about the cross-registration opportunity. What a great opportunity! I was able to earn credit at UMass/Lowell where I eventually plan to transfer." Hundred of students have taken advantage of these intercollegiate choices and have expressed satisfaction with the experience.

A student pays the same amount as the per credit fee at his/her home campus. Grades and credits are automatically sent to the student's campus registration office and become part of the transcript. Students can take one or two courses through NECCUM every semester - up to half of the credits required for full time status - as long as the courses are not currently available at the home campus.

Students who attend a NECCUM institution are also offered the opportunity to use the library at the ten other colleges in the region. Library privileges include access to over two million books, thousands of periodicals and newspapers plus the latest in CD-ROM, database searching and other technological advances.

The Northeast Consortium of Colleges and Universities in Massachusetts also encompasses professional development opportunities, academic and information sharing, joint approaches to dealing with drug and alcohol abuse, compliance with the American Disabilities Act, telecommunication and multicultural initiative and strategies.

Catalogs and master schedules for all NECCUM schools and more information are available in the registrar's office of all member institutions. Ask your advisor for more details.

Baseball Team Extends NECC Dominance

After returning from Florida the River Hawks have dropped only one contest out of their eleven games. The River Hawks extended their NECC winning streak last Wednesday, by improving their first place conference record to 8-0.

Winless Franklin Pierce College offered no competition to the streaking Hawks in either of the double-header games. In the first game, the River Hawks used the Franklin Pierce pitching staff for their own personal batting practice, pounding out 16 hits to give them the 16-0 victory. Keith Qualter lead the way offensively, going 3-5 with a triple and 4 RBI's. Mike Cruff and Mark Deschenes also had effective days, with both going 2-3 with a triple and a RBI. Lowell's potent offense scored 15 runs more than they needed, thanks to the stellar pitching of Freshman pitchers Robb Theroux and Greg Marchand. Theroux shut down Franklin Pierce, allowing just two hits and striking out 10 in eight innings, while Marchand, making his collegiate debut, closed out the game with a 1-2-3 ninth inning.

Alan Blackington continued to display Lowell's pitching prowess in the second game when he carried a no-hitter through the fifth inning. When the game was called due to darkness in the seventh inning, Blackington had dished out eleven strikeouts, helping to improve his season record to 2-1. Like in the earlier game, Lowell pounded the shell-shocked Franklin Pierce pitchers for 6 runs, with Mike Cruff smashing his third home run of the season to lead Lowell to the 6-1 victory.

Lowell Stuns National Champ Merrimack

Apologies to the UMass Lowell Softball team. Due to unforeseen problems last week, nothing was mentioned about their upset of defending National Champion Merrimack College.

Merrimack came to Lowell expecting an easy win against the struggling River Hawks, but ran into a very determined squad. Junior Donna Mills went 2-4 with a double and a single, and Senior

Laurie Zanca went 2-3 with two singles and an RBI. Leigh-Ann Fowler pitched in with a clutch 2-run single in the fourth inning. While the Lowell Ladies were giving the Merrimack pitching staff fits, Freshman Melissa Ottaviano was pitching masterfully. She threw seven solid innings, allowing only three hits by a frustrated Merrimack squad. With the 6-3 win, Ottaviano improved to 6-6 on the season. Hopefully the softball team can use this as a springboard to close out the season on a high note.

Again, we on the sports staff apologize for this mistake and will do everything in our power to make sure something like this never happens again.

Sports Speak...with Stephen A. Boucher

Random thoughts from the sports world while holding a rainfall gauge atop Ball Hall.

*EARTH TO CHET. Looking over the long list of Boston College football games to be nationally televised next fall, Athletic Director Chet Gladchuk was quoted as saying that Mike Mamula, the junior defensive end who passed on his senior year to declare himself eligible for the NFL draft, would have had a lot of exposure if he stayed in school. Exposure? Mamula was simply the talk of the NFL scouting combine held in February, which saw him improve from a third-round pick to possibly a top-ten selection, most likely earning him a million-dollar contract in the process.

*Speaking of entering the pros early, let's hope Marcus Camby returns to Amherst in the fall because, one, the Minutemen will drop to non-contender status without him; and, two, because Camby is not ready to handle the big boys yet, as evidenced by his disappearing act against "Big Country" Reeves in the tourney. I can't picture Camby holding off Ewing, Hakeem, or Shaq.

*Something about John Calipari is unsettling. Too smooth, perhaps. Certainly, his team was too often lackadaisical this past season, losing to George Washington twice, and many time having trouble with other lightweights. Look at it this way: they consider themselves a top-10 team, and when playing against comparable teams, Arkansas, Kansas, Oklahoma

State, and Maryland, the Minutemen went 2-2. They would not have had quite the winning record playing in the ACC.

*Don't shake me from this wonderful stupor I'm in which has Jose Canseco actually wearing a Red Sox uniform and tearing down the light tower over left-field in Fenway. This is like Dustin Hoffman coming to UMass-Lowell to instruct an acting workshop.

*GO HAWKS! Your school's baseball team was ranked second in New England in Division II and found themselves atop the NECC standings as of April 11. This week the Hawks host number one ranked New Haven, also an NECC foe, with double-headers being played both Friday and Saturday.

*DO YOU KNOW THE WAY TO SAN JOSE? Erstwhile Bruins center Craig Janney is not exactly lighting it up the West Coast for the Sharks after being banished from Mike Keenan's St. Louis doghouse. Through April 11, the passive slotman had but 5 goals and 13 assists, and stood at a minus 4. Came from the same mold as Joe Juneau, author of 4 goals this season.

*Rumors have it that professional baseball and hockey may be coming to Lowell. The city is vying for a minor league team in the AHL, and baseball interests headed by Paul Tsongas are hoping for a minor league team as well.

-Miami Heat All-Star forward Glenn Rice torched the road-weary Orlando Magic for 56 points on Saturday, breaking Michael Jordan's NBA season high of 55.

-Boston Celtics remain hot, beat Orlando Magic and crush the Detroit Pistons. Recent winning improves Celtics playoff chances.

-Unlikely happenings in NHL. The New York Rangers and The Montreal Canadiens, the last two Stanley Cup Champions, are in serious jeopardy of missing the playoffs altogether.

-Red Sox exhibition schedule opens with a bang. New Sox Mark Whiten and Jose Canseco both homer in win over the Minnesota Twins.
